About Graphology

Handwriting analysis (Graphology) is the science of identifying, understanding and evaluating the personality of a writer through his or her script. Similar to facial expressions, bodily movements, and other mannerisms, handwriting reveals personality.

Sigmund Freud remarked, "There is no doubt those men also express their character through handwriting" and German researcher William Preyer confirms that "handwriting is brain writing".

Users of Graphology

Psychologists, counselors, teachers, head hunting firms, businesses, government agencies and individuals. In America today some 8000 firms including IBM, Fuji Xerox, Burger King and McDonalds use handwriting analysis for recruiting personnel.
